

Area archeologica di Libarna

Category: Archaeological sites

business description: The re-discovery of Libarna came about because of work connected with the construction of the Strada Regia dei Giovi (1820-1823) and the Turin-Genoa railway (1845-1854).

The current archaeological area represents just a small part of the ancient town, sited in a strategic position along one of the most important roads in northern Italy (via Postumia).

Today, the amphitheater, theatre, several urban roads and two living quarters are visible, where the domus of a large size and decorative richness stands out, with floors in marble slabs and a large mosaic depicting the myth of Licurgo and Ambrosia.

Some of the most important artifacts are on display in the archaeological section of the Royal Museums of Turin and in the Museum Area of Libarna, hosted inside the Town hall of Serravalle Scrivia. The re-opening of the archaeological site is accompanied by an articulated program of events, developed with the support and collaboration of the Municipality of Serravalle Scrivia, which includes educational activities, theatrical performances, concerts and themed visits.

The archaeological area awaits visitors with a varied cultural offer which joins opportunities of knowledge and educational insights with the opportunity to enjoy the beauty, in the charm of the meeting between historical and scenic elements, also with a view to the use of the heritage connected with renewed uses.
